

Congressman Lungren addresses the House of Representatives regarding the repeal of anti-trust immunity for the health insurance industry under the McCarron-Ferguson Act of 1945 and Lungren's amendment to the bill. Using bipartisan language from former Judiciary Chairman Jack Brooks (D-TX), Lungren's amendment was passed out of the House Judiciary Committee with unanimous consent.

However, Rep. Lungren's amendment was stripped from the legislation by the House Leadership and the Rules Committee refused to allow the Lungren amendment to be debated on the House Floor. In this video, Rep. Lungren discusses the importance of his amendment for ensuring that the health insurance industry does not become even further concentrated and the bipartisan support for the amendment.
